Brazil: Urban terrorism may be on the upswing. Followers of extreme leftist Carlos Marighella, most of whom have probably eluded the roundup of oppositionists in recent days, are reported planning to set off a bomb--possibly for only psychological effect--at a meeting of American businessmen in Santos tonight. These terrorists may also have been responsible for two bombings in Sao Paulo on 17 December, one of which damaged property of a US-owned company. An upsurge of leftist terrorism may well prompt violent counteraction by extreme rightists.
